

Masthead Logo

The Iowa Review

Volume 19
Issue 2 Spring-Summer

Article 16

1989

Each from Different Heights

Stephen Dunn

Follow this and additional works at: <https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Dunn, Stephen. "Each from Different Heights." The Iowa Review 19.2 (1989): 77-77. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3746>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

The rat in my crawlspace, the vicious rat:
No forgiveness necessary.
I, who put out the poison:
God of rats, forgive me once again.

EACH FROM DIFFERENT HEIGHTS

That time I thought I was in love and calmly said so was not much different from the time I was truly in love and slept poorly and spoke out loud to the wall
and discovered the hidden genius of my hands.
And the times I felt less in love,
less than someone,
were, to be honest, not so different either.
Each was ridiculous in its own way
and each was tender, yes,
sometimes even the false is tender.
I am astounded
by the various kisses we're capable of.
Each from different heights
diminished, which is simply the law.
And the big bruise
from the longer fall looked perfectly white in a few years.
That astounded me most of all.